Sarah (Adamson) Varney grew up in Milton, Wisconsin on her family's 250-head dairy goat farm. She attended the University of Wisconsin-Platteville and received her bachelor's degree in animal science, with an emphasis on dairy science. At UW-Platteville, Varney worked part-time on the school's dairy farm performing various daily tasks.

After graduation, Varney worked as a lead herdsman for a dairy goat farm, where she worked closely with farm staff to address challenges associated with nutrition, milk production, reproduction and overall animal health. She then returned to help run her family farm prior to joining the Vita Plus team.

Varney is responsible for developing and growing the Vita Plus dairy goat program. She is the primary resource for dairy goat nutrition and management and is the technical resource for all Vita Plus staff, facilities, and dealer partners.
